

Suffolk Mortlocks

The recoverable part of the Suffolk story seems to start early in Tudor times in Haverhill, where it is on an equal footing with the start of Mortlocks in Essex at nearby Birdbrook; some individuals had landholdings in both parishes. These records will be found under Essex, which is the starting point for these trees.

However, in 1569 there died Henry, a tenant of Stonehall Court manor, Moulton; but he was succeeded by his daughter and heiress Margaret Pinder, so had no living male issue.

One thing that stands out in some of the villages, notably Clare and Shimpling, is how there might be several Mortlock families with children all of an age. It is difficult to imagine today what it must have been like to grow up in a relatively closed community, surrounded not only by siblings but also by close cousins of one's own age. In Shimpling in 1861 there were three Mortlock families all living next door to each other, others not far off. For the parents one supposes that there was a level of mutual support totally missing today. Besides paternal connections there will also often have been distaff relationships. In the parish registers, besides Mortlock the same names recur and recur. At the humblest level, where perhaps the typical ag. lab. never left his immediate neighbourhood - something borne out by Cobbett - the choice of a mate probably lay exclusively within one's own village. This implies centuries of in-breeding, suggested by the manner, as remarked before, that the same East Anglian surnames are repeatedly joined to Mortlock, leave alone instances of brothers and sisters marrying sisters- and brothers-in-law.

The Suffolk Mortlocks start off as yeomen, substantial people. Their status can be finely judged by George Gent, second husband of the widow of Thomas Mortlock of Haverhill, having to lay out £3100 on an annuity for her jointure - this in 1689, when a labourer would be lucky to see a shilling a day. Later on there are a large number of skilled craftsmen, their trades passed on from father to son - blacksmiths, clockmakers, carpenters - but in the end there are just too many sons and many take a tumble down the Jacob's ladder of opportunity and end up as ag.labs - landless peasants. Their womenfolk eke out the family's living as perhaps dressmakers, or in trades long lost to us such as horsehair weaver or straw plaiter. The censuses show us children as young as eleven listed as labourers. In spite of this inauspicious start some of these climb out of their rut into suburban respectability. Perhaps when the going gets tough, the tough get going.

The Suffolk exercise has provided some interesting lessons in pronunciation and geography. Cowling is Cooling; Haverhill is Hayverel; Ousden is Owsden; Thorpe Merieux is Thorpe Meroo; and so on. Horningsheath is Horringer and now so spelt; Shimplingthorne is now Shimpling, in line (confusingly) with its namesake in Norfolk. There are two Denhams and two Eyes, and several Fordhams, and so forth.

Glensford

Besides being the source for the Bradfield Mortlocks which follow, Glensford appears to be the origin for at least some of the Mortlocks of Hundon(see above).

A dynasty of Philips originating in Glensford finished up in Great Cornard as millers. Eventually, on 24.4.1833 (only two years before his death), Philip III put his mills up for sale. They were described as a water corn mill of four stones with an inexhaustible supply of water and with navigation to Manningtree and Mistley; and a post mill of two stones on the east side of the road from Sudbury to Cornard [BP]. Philip IV ended up in Colchester. Philip III's brother William, also a miller but a journeyman, migrated out of the county to Chelmsford.

The Bradfields

The Bradfield Mortlocks are originally from Glensford. As will be seen from the tables they had farms in various locations all the way to southern Norfolk and near Lowestoft, following a line of good land that curves north-east from south-west Suffolk.

Shimpling

The twentytwo pages of Shimpling trees continue (arguably) from a progenitor from Glensford, illustrating a three and a half century continuity, mostly at that humblest level in society, the agricultural labourer. Those that 'bettered' themselves had to do it by leaving these Suffolk roots far behind.

One might wonder why men from Suffolk would finish up in Burton on Trent. William (1854-1923) was one of the Suffolk men (see also Denham) who followed the barley crop to Burton where it was malted and then turned into beer. This was a development that followed the arrival of the railways which facilitated the centralisation of brewing on the Trent and also the movement of the labour necessary for malting the barley at its destination. The Staffordshire people called these East Anglians "Norkies", presumably meaning "from Norfolk" - the migrants came from both counties. Their work done, they returned to East Anglia ready for the haysel (haymaking), the grain harvest and so to the next malting season. The fact that they were in effect recruited as a group probably explains another thing that would otherwise be obscure, which is why both the Shimpling and Denham migrants, who would normally not have been known each other, all finished up in the same street - Thornley St. That this was an annual migration, complete with families, also explains why William's first two children, although born in Stapenhill near Burton, were baptised back among their roots in Shimpling. William eventually stayed on, working first for Allsopps and then for Bass and then setting up on his own as a grocer and bottler in 1883. He also acquired a farm, the land later becoming public allotments named the Mortlock Allotments after him. William was a member of the local Oddfellows. One can wonder what he would have made of Bass being bought out by Belgians.

His son Albert Thomas followed him as a grocer and bottler. The next son, William George, farmed locally but later moved to Kent, possibly after army service in the Kaiser's War. Their sister Alice ran the Acorn Inn for Bass Charrington and survived her husband (who, unfortunately, slit his own throat) to become, eventually, the oldest licensee in Burton.

The Norkie story is told more fully in "Where Beards Wag All" by George Ewart Evans, 1977

The dates under Letitia Mortlock bear study. The children were those of her eventual husband, so we must assume that she followed her man back to Neath where they waited patiently for his first wife to die. Much the same applied to Emma's eventual (1927) marriage to her lover Herbert Mortlock, cousin to her long-deserted first husband, Herbert's cousin Abraham Hayward. These are not the only pieces of juicy scandal buried in the tables. The usual bucolic illegitimacies triggered by the blooming of the sukebind apart, there is also Ida May's alleged siring by the Bishop of Colchester to titillate. As people used to say, "We don't have much money but we do see life". The tables themselves are rendered more complicated by the cousin marriage of Margaret and Alfred, the brothers Edward and Thomas marrying two Sparke sisters, and Charles' marriage to his cousin Alfred's widow.

It will be seen how some Shimpling Mortlocks radiated to or had links with the nearby Cosford registration district, principally with the villages of Alpheton and Cockfield.

A Samuel from Shimpling appears to have settled in Maldon, Essex (with a Shimpling bride) which may say something about the Essex Mortlocks.

The more wayward Mortlocks of Shimpling were perhaps redeemed by Samuel Mortimer Mortlock (see chart Shimpling (16)). After being a policeman in Shimpling, Samuel joined the Metropolitan Police 26.1.1874. He served as PC 357K at Mile End and at Arbour St, Stepney. Judging by the number of assaults on him recorded in The Times, [and Reynold's Newspaper, 18.12.81] he seems to have had quite a vigorous career. On one occasion he received a cut over his left eye but the Bench had no sympathy - the medical students he arrested asserted that they had been hit from behind, and the magistrate said that Samuel and his sidekick had exceeded their duty, and let the miscreants off. He crowned his career by having a finger bitten off in 1886 [Lloyd's Weekly, 18.4.86].

(George) Abraham of Shimpling emigrated to Hull and founded a dynasty of seamen - quite an adaptation for inland farming folk - at about the same time that Henry did the same from Mildenhall, except that his clan later became established at Grimsby. For George/Abraham's rackets life see Shimpling (18 & 19).

NB the number of marriages to FLACK in Shimpling (see also www.flackgenealogy.com).

Some Shimpling Mortlocks emigrated to Canada and the United States - to Washington State via Manitoba, and, a little less far away, to New Hampshire via Nova Scotia.

Cavendish

In 1791 John and then Richard had land straddling the mutual boundary of Cavendish and Glemsford, where Richard was born. Richard's son George had moved back earlier from Cavendish to Glemsford.

An internet correspondent to curiousfox has identified the Mortlocks of Cavendish (and their relations the Cutmores) to be particularly likely to be on parish relief. In 1861 John Mortlock of Cavendish was in jail in Portsmouth, crime unspecified. The vicissitudes of Samuel who ended up transported to, and dying in Tasmania are set put against his entry in the tables. The Cavendish Mortlocks must have been caught up in some local feuds; in 1878 Charles - clearly better off than his indigent cousins - found his rick fired. NB some other Mortlocks came to Cavendish from Clare q.v.

Cavendish (ed. R Freeth), published by the Cavendish (millennium) Book Project in 2002 gives a good account of the village, and relates how Miss Fanny Hughes Mortlock bought the now picturesque Yew Tree House for £150 in 1938, 'one side only habitable'. It passed to her sister Miss Hilda Mortlock who in 1966 received a grant to put in a bathroom; it passed out of Mortlock hands in 1970.

Some Cavendish Mortlocks emigrated to the USA, principally to Pennsylvania and Virginia.

Sudbury

As might be expected from the local market town, Sudbury has attracted some incomers, probably from its surrounding villages. It also gives its name to a Registration District, but the events listed probably belong either to Glemsford, Shimpling and so forth or to nearby villages, or perhaps to one of the eight Essex villages included (annoyingly to the genealogist) in this RD.

Hundon [Risbridge RD]

At least part of the Hundon Mortlocks seem to have originated from Glemsford, via a double link between the Mortlock and Tiffen families. Also, both groups have connections with Weston Colville; and note the similar choices of Christian names for their children between the Robert 'of Weston Colville' who was buried in Hundon in 1746 and the Robert, son of Richard, born there in 1700. However I have purposely abstained from putting in any speculative links, apart from a general pointer from one to the other.

NB instances of Hundon Mortlocks migrating back to Haverhill, which may be coincidence or may reflect an original connection.

Hundon church caught fire in 1914, taking its registers with it although some entries proved recoverable. Where registers are available on microfilm, generally the data around the burnt edge of each page is lost. A limited copy of the Bishop's transcript is available in Bury CRO; another in the library of the Society of Genealogists.

Hundon also had an Independent chapel used by Mortlocks from round about.

If you want a glimpse of Victorian rural poverty, the 1861 census of James and Hannah's family shows Matilda as a farm labourer aged 7, her brother George one aged 6.

William the Chapel Clerk

William Mortlock (1794-1849) served for many years, and was succeeded by his son, as Chapel Clerk of Emanuel College, Cambridge. He left a numerous posterity strung out from Devon to Lancashire, with a female line in South Wales, and indeed one of his grandchildren married an Edinburgh girl. William's father was settled in Cherry Hinton, but originally seems to have come from Hundon, so his genealogical table sits better here than with Cambridgeshire which, however, is the county where much of the family was located for three generations.

For more detail, see separate narrative; but note Edward's emigration, eventually to California, from Chiswick to Los Angeles

George 1801/2GM-3.5.1883SB, lab. unm., in Sudbury workhouse 1881; svt GM 1841 (living Glemsford with Harriett JARMAN 1820/5Sfk 1841). George had been the Workhouse cook for many years but in 1872 got into a bit of bother. First, on 14.4.72 he was 'drunk and riotous' [IJ,4.5.72] and then [IJ,17.8.72] he was sentenced to 21 days hard labour for stealing meat.

Horsehair was a traditional Glemsford product, organised in 1907 into a factory which made such things as barrister's wigs and cavalry plumes, which only closed in 2001.

Charles Edward 9.1843-22.2.46GM
Mary Ann 1.1847-11.5.47GM

24.11.1863: James MORTLOCK, a ragged boy from Glemsford, was given 2 months hard labour for stealing a tame rabbit [BP][so at least he got fed].

^ svt in Shelfanger, Norfolk 1891 'deaf from childhood'

In 1851 Robert Fenner Mortlock (-3.pp) and Edward jnr's families were sharing the same cottage. In 1861 the two Roberts, Edward & John were living in adjacent dwellings

September 9th 1903, Stanstead, Suffolk Free Press: On Thursday afternoon two little girls named Rhona Oakley and Jeanette Adams were searching for some ducks which had strayed from the farm of Mr Biggs when they came upon a man who had fallen in the river near Duffs bridge, he was in an exhausted condition, they raised the alarm and Inspector Berry and P.C. Gowing were sent for, they managed to get him out and brandy and whisky were administered and he was wrapped in warm rugs and straw. Enquiries proved he was Robert Mortlock aged 73 and lived at Hartest and had walked into the reeds and rushes.

^ prob Edith M '11 Hull' lodging in Newington S.London 1891 with George A '10 London'; back in Sculcoates 1901

~ The Hull Packet chronicles the vicissitudes of Abraham's wife Sarah Mortlock, starting in 1873, when, as a 'very old offender' Sarah, of Fetter Lane, Hull, is given seven days' hard labour for being drunk. Four weeks later [21.10.70] she receives the same sentence after being 'five times before the court this year'. Nothing deterred, a repeat is reported 18.11.70. She reappears in print as a 'disreputable-looking woman' for a 17th appearance 22.10.80. Now she is merely fined forty shillings, with repeat prescriptions reported 25.1.82, 8.4.82, and 10.7.82. Sarah finally received her comeuppance on 17.7.85 when, on her thirtieth appearance in court (and now of 6, Edward Court, New George St), she received two months' hard labour (presumably, at last, time to dry out) after stabbing her next-door neighbour who had refused to give her a halfpenny to buy drink. He must have been pretty glad of the rest from her activities next door.

~ in 1791 Richard leased a 12 acre tenement (farm - barns, stables, orchards, gardens) called 'Whites', in Cavendish and Glemsford, at a peppercorn rent and at the same time other properties - 'Jenkins' of 10.a and 'Stalders' of 6.a, all apparently previously occupied by John Mortlock. A farm called 'Trucketts' was also involved when Richard sold out in 1818. [NofolkCRO,WLSxxxxvi/13,419x4]

^ Martha CUTMORE married Charles Prior, a farm lab. from Gt.Waltham. In 1847 she killed her baby daughter. She was acquitted at Chelmsford assizes, but because she was deemed insane, sent to Springfield Gaol. By about 1852 she was pronounced cured and allowed to return home.

% 'illegit' although baptised four months after his parents' wedding. This may mean that he had been born some time previously (see -6.pp). His prison hulk records put Samuel as born 1794 or 1798.

- Charged with larceny at Bury St Edmunds Quarter Sessions 1807 but discharged 'ignoramus' (which probably means no witnesses turned up).
- Charged with others with stealing sacks of malt, 8 cheeses, sugar and a silver watch from waggons belonging to owners in Melford & Clare. Convicted at Bury St E. Quarter Sessions 17.7.1815 & given seven years transportation [BP,7.6. & 2.8.1815, & IJ]. Sent to the hulk Captivity at Devonport, he was discharged 'Free Pardon' 27.7.20. However a Free Pardon could still involve some sort of penalty.
- Charged again with larceny but acquitted ('no bill') October 1827.
- Given seven years' transportation at Bury 7.5.1832 for (with two others) stealing 2½ bushels of potatoes at Cavendish [BP,25.1. & 14.3.32]. He was on the sick list of the convict hospital hulk Hardy at Portsmouth 5.5-11.5.1832. He was noted as 'transported before' indicating the previous sentence although he did not leave England that time (this was not unusual). He was now sent overseas in Lord William Bentinck; he is recorded in Tasmania 1832, 1833, 1835, 1841; 'promoted' 1835 in Tasmania. The Mary who had a (sadly, short-lived) child in Cavendish without the assistance of a husband in 1834 was his unfortunate wife.

Mary MORTLOCK wife of Samuel acquitted of receiving a quantity of stolen barley [BP,19.9. & 31.10.1832]
