

The Risbridge and Thingoe Registration Districts

Clare and South London

The Lewis mentioned above, who was bailiff of Clare in 1601, and who contracted successive marriages there in 1588 and 1598, was not the first Mortlock there; Robert Mortlock was of sufficient substance to be modestly taxed in the 1524 Lay Subsidies. Mathew, who left only daughters, was Lewis' contemporary but may or may not have been a near relative.

The later Clare family seems to start with Thomas, a clockmaker in Stradishall. He must have had links with the Denham Mortlocks, for he was granted settlement there, with his family, in 1772. As will be seen the Denham Mortlocks already had links to Clare; and Clare also had a link to Wicken in Cambridgeshire. Thomas was burgled in 1744. One wonders if his stock in trade was insured. Clearly one needs not only skill and training, but also substantial working capital to be a clockmaker. This Thomas may have been the father - how else would he get both name and apprenticeship - of the next Thomas, clockmaker, and also of the Elizabeth whose illegitimate son William fathered a traceable line of skilled craftsmen and, via his son Richard, an ironmongery business. Altogether there are well over a dozen Clare Mortlocks following skill-of-hand professions, half of them watchmakers. However there were ultimately not enough apprenticeships to go round the surviving children. Some later Mortlocks were labourers and servants. William (1797) moved to Cavendish, and when his sons grew up two moved to Chatham to enlist as Royal Marines and Benjamin joined the army. Another group of close relations migrated to East Plumstead where they will have had the comfort, in an alien urban environment, of useful mutual support.

As to the apprenticeships, these have to be presumed; they are not traceable (thus untaxed) so must have been something within the family; what is noticeable about these Mortlocks is demonstrable manual dexterity. One of the clockmakers, perhaps finding Clare rather crowded for his skill, moved to Marazion in Cornwall which is about as far, within the United Kingdom, as any Mortlock migrated.

The story of the Mortlock clockmakers of Clare is told at greater length, separately, in the article Good With Their Hands.

Many of the Clare lines lead to Woolwich, for a time a close-knit clan of greengrocers. Descended from them are the three Mortlocks who worked at Adnams' brewery in Southwold in the first half of the "last" century. They are mentioned in R & S Clegg's book Southwold published by Phillimore in 1999. Here Frank remembers his father Rocky, a boxer with a broken nose, bringing home sugar mice from the brewery - not ready-made ones, but the strings from the sugar loaves with a useful lump of sugar still attached. In 1981 Frank took charge of the drill and discipline of the Southwold & Reydon Corps of Drums - his father had been in this band in its previous incarnation.

I have included here some records from Cowlinge, Stradishall, and Stansfield because of their geographical position.

The Mortlock girls' school in Clare was nothing to do with the clockmakers - the Mortlock ladies involved were part of the China dynasty and I have written this up in their narrative. It is yet another puzzling example of unrelated Mortlocks coming into a Mortlock village when they have the rest of East Anglia to choose from; in this case from Wimpole via Kings Lynn.

There were two more clockmakers in Clapham (south London) - a connection with Clare may be presumed but is not easily visible. It is highly probable that the Richard who was a butcher in Lambeth was brother to the Clapham clockmaker Samuel. I have been told that his dates of 1749 to 1830 support this but have been unable to find a south London burial record for him for 1830, let alone one confirming his age. However the idea of two brothers both taking their skills to the same area seems highly plausible. I have therefore interpolated this tree immediately after the trees for Clare. It will be seen that another Mortlock migrated to Lewisham, founding a dynasty of gardeners.

Denham, Horringer and Chevington

We are now in the Thingoe deanery and Registration District. The trees for Chevington and Denham are cross-related so they can be taken together.

As the twentieth century dawned two of the Denham men had finished up as coal miners, William (1950) in Brandon Byshottles in Co. Durham and Harry (1850) in Benwell in Northumberland, the latter probably via Staffordshire, his wife's county of origin. Let's pause to think what it must have meant to go down into a pitch-black pit, choking with dust, sweaty-hot and cramped for hours at a time. No more haw and hedgerow, no more lark and larkspur, no more checking the rabbit snare. Above ground the Suffolk accent must have stood out as a joke to the northerners, whose own dialect - dialects were stronger then - would have been close to incomprehensible. What hardships must have obtained in rural Suffolk to make this a better option!

One who stayed behind comes briefly to light in Curtsy to a Lady, by Zöe Ward (pub. Lavenham 1988): she tells how, in Horringer before the First World War, one Zip Mortlock 'from the Monument' always took the same 'dinner' with him every day, viz., a herring and a piece of cold rice pudding wrapped up together in a piece of newspaper, which he would consume every mid-day, wet or fine, winter or summer, sitting on the handle of his wheelbarrow in the Pleasure Gardens.

One of the Joseph Mortlocks in the table must be eponymous to "Joe Mortlock's Cottage" in Chevington.

Mortlocks from the Denham line emigrated to America while it was still a colony, and to Australia in 1857. Of these latter, descendants of Joseph (1832) and Ann (Godfrey), 243 descendants came to a reunion in 1981; 52 carried the name Mortlock; of these 40 were males.

Mortlocks from the Denham/Chevington line will be seen to have radiated to Barrow, to Little Saxham, and to Moulton, Gazeley and Higham which three are all in the Newmarket registration district; and, perhaps more predictably, to the town of Bury St Edmunds. From Barrow there is a radiation to Cheveley in Cambridgeshire and from thence to Walthamstow in Essex. Some of the unattributed West Ham records may well belong to this Denham/Chevington group of Mortlocks.

Some Denham/Chevington Mortlocks emigrated to Canada and New Zealand

Hargrave

Following an early eighteenth century family which does not obviously connect to any others, there is another moving from illegitimacy via pauperism to migration around the county, and another with connections to Barrow and Flempton and Hengrave which also seems to have had a bumpy ride through life. This is not the only example where illegitimacy seems to have spelt economic doom not only for the unfortunate mother but also for the stigmatised child.

Another Mortlock family (shown as part of the Blacksmiths' trees) migrated to Hargrave from Cheveley in Cambridgeshire, whither they seem to have come from Wicken via Wood Ditton.

The next six pages include a high proportion of the (sparse) IGI records for MORTLOCK for Surrey and Kent, probably submitted by Douglas Mortlock (+4.pp) Douglas did a great deal of research into Mortlock family history and genealogy and many of his discoveries have been incorporated into this work in various places. He was a company commander in the Shanghai Volunteers in 1941.

This family includes in Commodore Bob Mortlock RN (+4.pp) the highest-ranking UK Mortlock after Sir John Cheetham Mortlock of Cambridge, and, depending on how one assesses these things, Naughty Nina the late Countess of Shrewsbury. The successive 'improvement' in rank and occupation is a classic of English social mobility.

The connection with Clare is the work of Walter Ernest Mortlock (see Clare(13)).

Caroline Oxley CLEMENTS (next page) is said to have died in a cholera epidemic. Her children were taken to Jersey by their maternal grandmother, Clementina Sobieski Clements OXLEY (1797-1881, bur.Nunhead) who had them educated at Victoria College, Jersey. Both the boys went out to Australia gold mining but Joseph returned in 1876.

Caroline CLEMENTS' mother claimed to be a 3-greats niece of Clementina SOBIESKI, Princess Royal of Poland who married the Old Pretender. She was the daughter of John SOBIESKI, King of Poland in the 1670s, who was Charles II's godson. There is also a possible reference there to Pope CLEMENT who made a cardinal of Henry, Duke of York, who was brother to the Young Pretender (+1807).

There is an additional cross-connection from these CLEMENTS to the Australian MORTLOCKS of this line through the CHAPMANS.

A Captain MORTLOCK of the Portsea branch of the Church Army is mentioned in the Hampshire Telegraph 23.11.89; a Miss MORTLOCK is teaching Sunday School in Southsea 25.3.1893. These seem to be Joseph Coleman and Violet.

The NEWTONs (next page) claimed a collateral descent from Sir Isaac.

^ Edith and WRRRC were originally married 31.10.1896 at Greenwich but this may have been bigamous in the sense that WRRRC did not have proof that he was unmarried; or it may have been a secret from the family. WRRRC was said to have been a cowboy in the Wild West and to have carried a bullet in his head all his life, picked up in a bank robbery. Edith was in a London directory in 1903 as "Miss" and as a "typewriter". She was awarded an OBE for VAD work in Kent during the First World War.

^ John, by then a 30 yr old fishmonger in Brandon, enlisted in the Norfolk Rgt 1.3.1916 but was transferred to the Essex Rgt shortly thereafter. On 11th May 1917 he was shot in the left elbow; he was invalided on 7.11.1917. Noted as honest and industrious, at 5'3½" and 9st.5lbs he was no giant but he did his duty until his duty did for him - his papers are stamped DECEASED in several places. He gave as his NoK his sister Mrs A SEAMAN [PRO,WO364/5484]. It is only because of men like him that nowadays we have an England to love.

~ enlisted Chatham 15.9.1914, 18th Bn R.Fusiliers. NoK brother WC Mortlock.
 Commissioned Army Cyclist Corps, in August 1916 transferred to the infant and dangerous Royal Flying Corps and qualified as an Observer on 10th October. He was keen to learn to fly as a pilot but had to be grounded, due to persistent air sickness, somewhere in France in January 1917. Retrained as Equipment Officer after the CO of the recruit training centre wrote that he was 'very useful to me as he carries out his duties in a very capable manner'. Post-war went up to Oxford (BA Pembroke Coll.1922). After serving the Church as an army chaplain in India 1929-42, in 1948 appointed vicar of Sherborne with Windrush in Oxfordshire. Another remarkable example of English social mobility for those made of the Right Stuff. [TNA,W0339/35146; AIR76/360; Crockford's]

~ RMA 11.1.1886 [TNA, ADM159/24] ?tea dealer 95,Anchor & Hope Alley, Wapping 1881; carman 1890 (there 1890 but not there in the 1881 census)

^ Sidney George enlisted in the RMA, aged 15, in July 1888 as a trumpeter, later transferring to the Army in the Royal Garrison Artillery. Medical history embarrassing. Discharged at the end of his time in 1910, he served again 1914-19 by which time he was a Sergeant [TNA,W0364]. LS&GCM 1907.

@ doubtless with familial encouragement, Frederick (5'7", 38"chest) enlisted in 4th Q.O.Hussars. Perhaps the army did not suit; he deserted in Dublin but came back and after being arrested in Chester was sent to military prison. Five months later he 'ran' again but was apprehended in Colchester. His initial 'discharge with ignominy' (5.1.1892) was rescinded but he obtained a medical discharge in 1892 after chopping the end off his left index finger while banged up in the cells chopping oakum. [TNA,W097/3509/106, W086/41; Cheshire Observer 14.2.1891; Essex Standard 9.1.1892]. He seemed to turn his life around and became an engineer in a constructional gas company in Narberth, Pembs., where he is a 'manager' in 1911, b. Eastney. 3Q1902 in Lambeth he married Maud Alice Clanwine MAY, born 1868 in Hull, but bigamously, for which he was arraigned in 1904.

` Francis, 5'7", blue eyes, brown hair, assistant engineers' steward for the maiden voyage of SS Minnetonka 21.4.1924 [TNA,BT349 & <http://www.atlantictransportline.us/content/55Minnetonka.htm>]

"The 6 sons of Joseph 1832-1919 and Ann 1835-1923 all selected land at Dunluce which is a district between Dunolly and Bealiba in the state of Victoria. Over the years none of the original land has been sold outside of the family and further purchases have been made. Today at least 10 families make their living from this land and others have moved on and purchased land in other locations."

Samuel, 5'7½" 'addicted to drink', 'traveller', arrested 28.4.1928 for stealing 22 cases of candles, 10 cases of Preservine, 36 doz. Oxo cubes, 16 doz. Tins Ovaltine, 24 bottles Bovril from four different commercial owners. He was arrested again 17.1.1931 and eventually given 18 months for stealing two gross of Pan Yan pickles by a trick. He had a previous conviction for deserting his family, presumably before their divorce.
