

Mildenhall District

Worlington

The story of the Mildenhall and Lakenheath area starts in Worlington in the 1560s whence the Mortlocks seem to have radiated to Brandon. There are also early records for Long Barton, Little Barton and Barton Mills. However, see also the dynasty of blacksmiths that came into Freckenham, and later Worlington Manor Farm, from Hawstead. Further Mortlocks came into Brandon from Lakenheath, and also via a circuitous route, through Northamptonshire and Huntingdonshire, from Clare.

A tiny, primitive brass plate on one of the pillars of Worlington church records a 1620 Mortlock bequest to the parish of thirty shillings a year.

Much later, the unfortunate William, and his consort the even more unfortunate Lydia, exhibit more of those puzzling signs suggesting links, that we can no longer see, between different families of Mortlocks. It's the way he picks on existing Mortlock territory - Worlington and Soham - in different counties for his misadventures, when he has the whole of East Anglia to choose from (I have put his tree in the Cambridgeshire section).

The patriarch of the Mortlocks who migrated to Hull and Grimsby came from Worlington, but the parish register is silent as to his origins, as it is for the earlier (1806) James who migrated to Kensington; perhaps some nonconformity there. But when people in Hull or London pick on a village the size of Worlington for their place of origin, they have to be believed. Henry's heirs, most unusually for Mortlocks, took to the sea.

Freckenham

John and (?) his wife Frances left will in the Freckenham 'peculiar' in 1714 and 1722. John sealed his will with a seal of an anchor transfixing a heart. The seal on Frances' will is probably the same but is now too damaged to be read. John had a house 'by the bridge foot in Freckenham' and eleven acres of land in Badlingham, consisting of unrelated plots of two acres or less. Nevertheless he felt able to leave his under-age daughters marriage portions of £30 or £40 each.

Apart from these early records, see also Hawstead for the origins of the later local Mortlock line.

Barton Mills

This is a rather disjointed story, due to paucity of records, and it is not clear whether the ultimate family here are direct descendants of those who left the earliest records. However the trail is strong from Robert, miller, born 1795 but he seems to have been in Mildenhall and Worlington before settling in Barton Mills, so may have been an incomer from Mildenhall. The Christian name of Ambrose which recurs in this table was an East Anglian surname marrying into the Mortlocks elsewhere in Suffolk; also as Ambrose (1610) Mortlock of Brinkley, Cambs, possible progenitor of the China Mortlocks. This may be an invisible and unprovable link between the two families, particularly considering the land in Brandon held by Ambrose' probable grandson John.

Lakenheath & Mildenhall

This is the main core of the Mortlocks for this area. Some Lakenheath Mortlocks settled later in Brandon, bringing that wheel full circle.

The Mildenhall Mortlocks seem to be descended from those of Lakenheath, as are those of Mundford, Norfolk (q.v.). Thomas born in Mildenhall in 1752 removed to Attleborough in Norfolk (see that tree in the Norfolk section).

In 1895 [Manchester Times 17.5.95] Gertrude Mortlock, a domestic servant from 1888, sued her employers from 1893 (a Dr & Mrs Poole) over a bad reference. She won a farthing damages and no costs. This seems to be Gertrude Abigail (Mildenhall(2)), rescued by marriage and restored to East Anglia in 1896.

The ‘China’ Mortlocks

The John who was the progenitor of the Mortlocks who ran a prestigious china and glass emporium in Oxford Street, London, and who died in Brinkley in 1697, had land in Brandon and Brandon Ferry; so I have put this group immediately after the Mildenhall group.

This John may be the John born in Brinkley in 1636, so I have interleaved a Brinkley Mortlock tree at this point.

For more detail, see separate narrative.

^ christened twice, in Canada and also in the Lake District, probably at the Anglican church at Castle Sowerby where Michael Valentine KENNEDY was the clergyman

William Kennedy was 5'8" when he attested in March 1915. He rose rapidly to sergeant. He served in France from June to December 1916 when he was brought home and commissioned into 13th County of London Princess Louise' Kensington Regiment. Wounded in the back at Arras on 9th April 1917, he was later blown up and had his head driven "with considerable force" against the corner of a mine shaft. The Army would not accept that either his later pituitary tumour, which cost him the sight of one eye and most of the sight of the other, or his enlarged heart, or his persistent indigestion, or his later asthma were due to his service. It is clear from his papers that by the twenties the Army brass in Whitehall regarded the damaged products of the War as rather a bore [TNA,W0374/49164]. While being treated, he lost the sight of one eye - not because the eye had been damaged physically, but because this somehow related to an injured pituitary gland (or thymus/thalamus?). He learned to do copper plate engravings while he was convalescing. Perhaps lenses and persistence made up the difference for his poor vision. He married a sister of a KG WAGSTAFF and settled in Sprotborough, 2'W of Doncaster. In Doncaster he may have served in the ARP, judging by the subject matter of some of his work. Some of his etchings were offered for sale in 2004; others and some of their plates are held by the family. They included views of Sprotborough and Wadworth (3'S of Doncaster) (1940) as well as of Doncaster itself (1940). He was written up in 1982 (WK Mortlock, His Life and Work, Peter Tuffrey, pub. William Mortlock Association, paperback).

His mother Kate Mortlock was also known as a painter in Doncaster (reverting to her Mortlock name after the death of her second husband). She seems to have been painting rural scenes in Cumbria in 1898 - as well as being the composer of fifty songs and light piano pieces.

Noel was a clerk living in Ealing, 5'7" and 128 lbs when he enlisted into a reserve "Graduate" battalion (52nd Beds) in 1916. He was in the ranks in the Norfolk Regiment in 1917 and was commissioned in July 1918, when his education was described as "very fair" as was his military knowledge and his power of command. However the Army by then was desperate for subalterns and it was in his favour as a "temporary gentleman" that he could ride. "Disembodied"[] in 1918 he was promoted to Lieutenant on the reserve in 1920 and was allowed to retain his rank when he was fully discharged in 1921 [TNA,W0374/49162]. He went to work for the Northern Ireland Land Purchase Commission [LG 8.1.35]. In 1935 the Ministry of Health took him on as a clerk; in 1936 he was promoted Assistant Inspector of Insurance there. In the Second World War he joined up again and became an equipment officer in the RAF, being released as a Flight Lieutenant in August 1946.

@ recorded as REVEL in the parish register, REACH in the Quarter Sessions abstract; but surely the same person? and is this the Lydia born in 1809 who died 4Q1880 in Woodbridge, described as a "pauper lunatic" in the 1851 census? -- another William (1840-2Q77) also finished up in Woodbridge.

Woodbridge asylum was actually in nearby Melton.
The 1871 census identifies patients only by their initials.
