

The Mortlock Blacksmiths

The distinguishing features of these Mortlocks are (a) Mortlocks called Michael, (b) Mortlocks who are blacksmiths and (c (= a.b)) Mortlocks who are both. This is a similar pattern to the Mortlocks of Chippenham, Cambs. Although there seems to have been a Mortlock in Hawstead in 1568, the main family are all descended from a Michael who died and left a will in 1757. There's a little unsolved puzzle here, which is why did Michael's Michael became a wigmaker with the smithy passing to the third brother, James? The smith, a mighty man is he - perhaps young Michael wasn't, and did not grow up to have arms as strong as iron bands. His wigmaking, too was not profitable enough for his widow to escape the poor-house. One line leads to London via the army and thence to Portsmouth.

The main line in Lawshall, of blacksmiths, complete with one called Michael, comes from this Hawstead family. However there are several other records in the parish register which do not seem to be connected with this line - perhaps non-Lawshall Mortlock brides marrying Lawshall men. In another direction, there is a link to Freckenham via Michael's son Charles; so perhaps these smiths were Worlington Mortlocks originally, where Robert the smith died in 1650. All told there are at least twenty-seven smiths in these tables, most and probably all related, pumping their bellows in Worlington, Hawstead, Lawshall, Cheveley, Chippenham, Freckenham, Long Melford, Barrow, Bury St Edmunds, Isleham and Woodditton.

Eventually the smiths branched out into general engineering, as can be seen from the tables. One Samuel trained as a shoemaker - his two brothers became smiths, which suggests maybe Samuel was physically not up to it. Nor, financially; his vicissitudes in this respect are related against his entry in the tables.

For other Mortlock blacksmiths see also Samuel of Long Stratton, Norfolk, born 1794 [1851 census] and Chevington(5) for William (not immediately related), journeyman of Cheveley; see also the longer article about these Mortlock blacksmiths.

Michael MORTLOCK, farmer, Cowdery Farm, Merton, Wimbledon, bankrupt 1817 [Morning Chronicle 7.3.1817; Times, 26.2.17, 10.2.18, 19.11.18]. Probably the same Michael; may explain why, in his nun-cupative will, he apologises for being such a bad husband.

^ in 1751 Ann of Hawstead, "widow of Michael" renounced her executorship of Michael "blacksmith's" will [Crossfields, BStECRO, J545/56, 720/1/55]

^ Susan d.of Samuel, gent.(!) = 16.4.1859 St Marylebone, James WALKER Esq s.of Charles writer to the signet (therefore Scots) witness Bessie MORTLOCK

@ Betsey has a niece Bessie CORNELL b.1869 'Middlesex'. Betsy is probably the 'Bessie E' living in Marylebone with her unmarried cousin Susan MOORE in 1871.

- to Captain Thomas Walsh VOKES of Limerick, declared an outlaw (1859), cashiered 1861 & twice bankrupt, did flits to France and USA etc etc [Times, 25.11.59 & 30.5.1862; LG 25.10.53, 27.10.57, 12.7.61]

Theodosia, as 'Mrs Mortlock' of 8 Molyneux St, Bryanston Square, wrote to Charles Dickens in January 1856: her husband had run away 4 years ago leaving her with two small children; she had never written begging letters before. See ADDISON/ARRELL tree on Ancestry. Theodosia died 1913. Dickens was plagued by begging letters; he wrote them up in Household Words in 1850.

Samuel snr was reputed 'subject to fits'. One morning he got his nephew and apprentice Francis (-2.pp) up early to attend in the brewhouse. When Francis got there he found his uncle, head and shoulders immersed in his beer tub. Francis fished him out and Samuel gave a couple of breaths and expired. [IJ]

~ in 1901 Louisa, b.1886/7 'Chelmsford', 'schoolchild', is in the St Vincent de Paul convent & orphanage at 9, Lower Seymour St, Portman Square, Marylebone, London. In 1910, single, RC, she arrived in Montreal aboard SS Megantic, with Mary MORTLOCK, 1884London, RC, 'kitchen maid' c/o 'Mrs FRANCIS'.
